Why I am Asking You to Re-Elect Mayor SCOTT HILL

The governing of McMinnville is currently at a crossroads. We need a person with a calming, gentle hand to effect the changes we need. We need a person with experience to lead us for the next four years—that person is Mayor Scott Hill.

I had the honor of serving 24 years as McMinnville's Mayor. Needless to say, the knowledge I had of managing the city grew immensely from the time I started to the time I retired. I have always spoken about the apprenticeship I served to be able to manage the role of McMinnville's Mayor.

I had two wonderful people to help work with me, both long serving city managers—Joe Dancer and Kent Taylor.

Likewise, Scott Hill has served that apprenticeship. He first became involved in learning the management of our city as a member of the Budget Committee, eventually chairing the committee.

After watching Scott's work with the city, his work at his church, his time as president of the McMinnville Area Chamber of Commerce, and his association with the McMinnville Downtown Association while he managed Key Bank, I encouraged him to run for an open city council seat. He was elected in 2017. We were very fortunate to have Scott as part of the team.

Based on his long experience, it was only natural that Scott stepped up to be our Mayor when Mayor Olson was elected to the County Commission.

Scott has lead us through four years of stress and change with the hiring of a new city manager, a change in city attorney, a homeless crisis (that continues), and now this pandemic.

The governing of McMinnville is currently at a crossroads with the angst of the business community, the homeless crisis problem, housing issues, social unrest, contested city council seats and the pandemic. In my experience and logic, this is not the time to change the top leadership position in McMinnville.

We need a person with a calming, gentle hand to effect the changes we need. We need a person with that kind of experience to lead us for the next four years—that person is Mayor Scott Hill.
